EARTHQUAKE SHAKES CLOVERPORT

Frightens East Side--Occurs Early Sunday Morning--Accompanied By A Roar Of Noise
--Came From South

FRIGHTENED MANY IN TOWN

Had Cloverport been tucked in a cradle, she couldn't have got a better rocking than she did Sunday morning when the city was sound asleep. The earthquake was felt distinctly by many citizens here.

Dr. Chas. Lightfoot said it came from the south and occurred nineteen minutes past one o'clock. He had not retired and was standing by the mantel in his room at home. Dr. Lightfoot said he had noticed earthquakes before but never knew one to be accompanied by a sound.

One young lady thought burglars were trying to enter her home and she screamed for her "mama and papa;" and went downstairs and got in bed with them; the first time since she was a tiny girl when she was afraid of the dark.

Rev. Mr. Lewis jumped into his clothes, thinking that little Wm. Glen Har-daway had fallen from his bed. He says "social affairs had stirred up the town."

However, there was a real earthquake; it even shook the oil in the lamps.

Rev. Lusk's Family

Move To Elizabethtown.

Rev. W. A. Lusk, of Alabama, moved here this week and is occupying the Sinclair cottage on Mulberry street. He is one of the editors of the Baptist Forum, published at Atlanta and will spend only a small part of the time here with his family. Rev. Lusk is a brother-in-law of Mr. C. E. Keith-- Elizabethtown News.

Hill Billies Will Be Made Happy

Neither the Cow Healers nor the Pig-con Roosters will get a spark of gas until the "Hill Billies" get lights and fires. "The people on the hill shall get gas first" said Mr. Tague. A supply is expected Saturday from the well across from "the Kicking Post" where the drillers are meeting with wonderful success. E. E. Wheny is contractor and with him are Bob Snyder, driller, and Verue Dilton, tool dresser.

Mr. Nicholas Dead

Word was received here Monday by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Nicholas announcing the death of their son, Lafe Nicholas, who died in California December 31. He was the father of Miss Pauline Nicholas, of this city.

Business By Carloads

Green Bros., of Falls of Rough, shipped a car load of ponies to Greenfield, Ohio, last week to be used in newspaper contests. Friday they shipped a car load of lumber and a car load of flour and feed. They ordered four more cars for lumber to be shipped this week.

Enjoys Traveling.

When a man rides on the train every day seems he would like to stop when vacation time comes, but Mr. Lewis Root, passenger conductor on the Henderson Route, usually takes a trip. He and Mrs. Root have had several interesting visits to Texas and Mexico. His friend, Mr. Field, well-known to the men on the road, is making good in Oklahoma and sends back word that the West still holds many promises to all who will come and live there.

Can't Always Tell.

The politics of Mr. Newt McGlothlin, of Irvington, cannot be judged by the names of his dogs. A dog he had once named Guebel and his present one, Ruddy Roosevelt. The latter formerly belonged to Mr. and Mrs. Chamberlain.
When they took trips, Teddy was always left in the care of Mr. McGlothlin.
The dog seems to have adopted him as his master and for the last six years Teddy is always in the sound of his voice.

STIFF'S TRIAL

Continued For February Term of Court--Many Witnesses Were Present--Stiff is Held Without Bail.

The case of Richard Stiff who is charged with shooting Dan Burch, was tried at Hardinsburg Monday and continued for the February term of court. Stiff was held over without bail.

Dr. Milner was the first witness heard. He said he found Burch with the gun-shot wound from which he died. Dr. Milner said he had known the boy ten years, and thought his mind was all right. He also knew his mother and father and their minds were sound.

Mrs. Stiff, Richard's mother, said her son had been acting very strange for quite a while and caused her great uneasiness. Said he was restless at night and often took his gun to the barn with him.

Miss Blanch Stiff, sister of the defendant, was present when the shooting occurred, and said her brother came in the room with a double-barrel shotgun and asked Burch what he was doing in there. Burch replied that he just came in to see him. Stiff then told him to get out. Burch got up to go out of the room and Stiff shot him before he got out.

Jno. P. Haswell, Jr., represented the defendant and Jesse Eskridge the Commonwealth.

Following are some of the witnesses:
Sam Bassett, Will Peters, Henry
Parr, Bill Johnson, Alex Barger, Dr.
J. B. Frymire, Dr. Wm. Milner, J. P.
Troutman, Mrs. Lucy Speak, Mrs.
Sarah Burch, Mrs. Geo. Stiff, Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Burch.

Only Candidate

Lawrence Finn, the incumbent, is so far the only candidate for Railroad Commissioner in the First District, in which a convention will be held at Bowling Green August 31 to nominate a candidate for the Democrats. County conventions will be held August 12 to elect delegates and candidates must file written notice with the District Committee by June 3. There are thirty-nine counties in the district. If there is only one entry, the committee will meet June 9 and declare him the nominee.

Attorney Friend Being

Boosted For Congress.

Attorney Robert Friend, of Irvine, was in the city for a day last Thursday enroute to his home from Millersburg, where he has been visiting friends several days. Mr. Friend is one of the coming young attorneys of the Tenth District and his friends are boosting him for the next standard bearer of Democracy to oust Congressman Langley. Mr. Friend was strongly spoken of in the convention, which nominated Floyd Byrd, chiefly on account of his friendship among all factions of the party in the Tenth. --Richmond Climax.

Mrs. Edgerton Dead.

Mrs. Mary Wills Edgerton, formerly of this place, died in Howe, Howard county, Arkansas, December 29. She was born in Cloverport March 12, 1853.
She was a cousin of Charles and Joseph Smart, of this place. The deceased is well remembered by the older people of the town and county.

Almost A Dull Boy.

There is probably not a banker in Kentucky who sticks closer to his books than O. T. Skillman, cashier of The Breckenridge Bank. Mr. Skillman lost only two days from the bank last year, which is nearly all work and no play.

WONDERFUL

Spelling Battle At McDaniels-- Breckenridge County Spellers Victorious

Talking about Bret Hart's story of the "Spelling Bee at Angels" it was as nothing compared to the great spelling contest which took place last week between the good spellers of Grayson and Breckenridge counties. It was a battle royal with all the county pride of the two neighboring counties centered in the outcome. It looked like all the hard words in Webster's Dictionary would have to be given out before the contest could be determined.
There were forty-six spellers representing Grayson County and a like number representing Breckenridge. The battle took place at McDaniels in Breckenridge county. It came near being an all day conflict and those who stood in the two lines as contestants were weary and tired out before the end came.
At times it looked like Grayson would win as several of the Breckenridge spellers were knocked out of line by words they could not spell and then again the tides of battle set in toward Breckenridge. Those people who think that spelling is no longer well taught in our schools should have been at Mc-Daniels. The country boys and girls who stood in those lines were broken by a missed word and toward the last when only a few of the best were left on each side it appeared as if the dictionary did not contain any word they could not spell. The last four contestants were Miss Florence Dunn, Mr.
Armes, Miss Rhea Galloway and Miss Suda White. At the end it was a woman who won, proving that they are the best spellers. The victory went to Breckenridge county when Armes, of Grayson missed "decision" and Miss Dunn spelled it correctly and Breckenridge won the contest and the honor which went with it.

Fine Sale At Lodiburg.

Dear Mr. Babbage: I want to extend my thanks to the good help I had in my sale, which was the good advertising through a lively and wide-awake country paper and one of the best auctioneers in the county, Col. H. J. Gorsuch. Things brought a good price.

If you want to have a nice, clean sale, first advertise in a clean paper and then get a clean, first-class auctioneer. The News and Col. Gorsuch are sure to give satisfaction. I want to thank one and all for your noble service. I remain, your friend, Dan Miller.

Ride Ends In Calaboose

Two boys at Glen Dean were put in the lock-up Friday for jumping on moving trains. The marshal had warned them several times to desist.

Smart For His Age.

Lodie Thompson Bernard, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Marion Bernard and the grand-son of Mrs. Francis Thompson, is one of the smartest little friends the News editor has. He is just four years of age and works in the field with his father; he knows his letters and can pick The Breckenridge News out of a bunch of papers.

Money To Burn.

Mrs. Burt Muir threw $30 in the fire at her home in Louisville last week. It accidentally got mixed up with some paper on the table and she did not see them until the crisp, green backs were curling up in the flames.

AT PHELON'S FACTORY

The largest delivery of tobacco this season was here Monday. The wagons were lined up from High Street around Second Street to Phelon's Factory.
Sixty or more loads were received.
Among them were: Abe Corley, 1140 pounds; Alex Hall, 1000 pounds; Abe McGavock, 4000 pounds; J. H. Basham, 2000 pounds; Wm. Snyder, Reynolds Station; Jim Phillips, Balltown; James Furrow, 1400 pounds; Walter Brickey, over 2000 pounds.

Leonard Keenan brought in a load of tobacco for J. J. Keenan, who had a crop of 6000 pounds. The former said raising tobacco was starving to death and he had a notion to go to Kansas where Cal Bardette was getting $5 a month.

W. A. Weltstein, of Floral, was in early with his tobacco. His load was so small he said he was ashamed to tell the number of pounds--but a little is better than none.

J. P. Keenan, of Tar Fork, was in Monday with his fifth load of the red leaves. Altogether his crop amounted to 11000 pounds.

Wm. Snyder was here with his third load from Victoria. He raised 5000 pounds of tobacco.

Will Jones brought in a load of 1400 pounds for Wm. Ryan, of Victoria. Mr.
Ryan has a total of 4000 pounds of tobacco.

Henry Mays, of McQuady, brought his tobacco here. He had 1400 pounds.

G. W. Powders, of Hancock county, brought about 1200 pounds. He lost two and a half acres last fall by the heavy rains.

W. M. Beavin, of McQuady, brought in a load of 1135 pounds. Mr. Beavin is a member of St. Mary's In The Woods and says Father Knue is doing a great work there.

Pat Ryan hauled in some more tobacco for John Ryan, of Victoria, who had 4000 pounds.

J. H. Gibson, whose post-office is at Stephensport, delivered 2300 pounds of tobacco from his farm at Holt.

The most remarkable man of the tobacco men was W. R. Beatty, of Ryan's, about ten miles from town.
Mr. Beatty is eighty-three years of age --just think of it! A half century and more than a score, and able to sit up all night and start to town at 4 o'clock the next morning. He said he got so cold on his wagon that he got numb and had to walk for a while to stir up his blood. "But, I am just a boy," said Mr. Beatty, "and I have nothing to boast of except an appetite". Some of the boys accused him of having a jug on his wagon and he declared if one had been on it, he would have been afraid of its contents.

Beautiful Book Concerning Winter Resorts Along The Queen And Crescent Line Sent
Upon Request

A most beautiful and valuable book of seventy pages with illustrations and statistics concerning winter resorts in the South, hotel rates and much other important information, has just been issued by the Queen & Crescent Route and will be sent free to prospective tourists. No person who expects to spend anytime in the south this winter should not be without one of these publications. The book is in the nature of a directory of all the important places in Florida, Alabama, the Carolinas, Louisiana, Georgia, Cuba and the Ba-hama Islands, with generous illustrations of the more important resorts and points of interest. Among the numerous half-tone likenesses are those of High Bridge, the Incline at Lookout Mountain, Battery Park Hotel, Biltmore and interesting Florida and Cuban scenes and hotels. The cover design is the reproduction of a scene on the East Coast of Florida and depicts in realistic fashion the ocean waves and steamers in the distance and the palmettos and vegetation in natural colors on the shore--the latter being characteristic of the perpetual climate conditions of that charming country. A large outlay of money was required in the production of this book, which was issued for the convenience of the patrons of the Queen & Crescent Route. Parties anticipating a trip to the south this winter will be cheerfully supplied with a copy of the book free of cost by dropping a postal card to W. A. Beckler, General Passenger Agent, Queen & Crescent Route, Cincinnati, Ohio. A careful study of the publication will fully acquaint the untitled with the best there is in the land of perpetual summertime.

LODIBURG.

Misses Ida Belle Ater and Mirl Basham attended church at Union Star last Sunday, and were the guests of Mrs. John Rollins.

Miss Nannie Gibson was the guest of Mrs. Byron Beauchamp, of Steph-ensport last week.

Miss Ava Belle Henry, of Brandenburg, was the guest of Mrs. J. W.
Brown last week.

Mrs. Ollie Burch and daughter and Miss Cora Brown, of Rhodella, were in town one day last week.

A. M. Hardin was in Irvington last week on business.

Sam Brown was the guest of friends at Brandenburg last week.

Coleman Haswell was in our town last week.

The social given by Mrs. Deacon last Friday evening was an enjoyable affair. Those present were: Misses Ava Belle Henry, Nina Hardin, Mamie Adkisson, Annie L. Hardin, Emaree Bandy, Alma Keys, Vanda Robertson, Annie Keys, Estelle Deacon, Allie
Keys, Nannie Payne, Lucille Parr,

No Place Like Kentucky

Dear Mr. Babbage: Enclose find one dollar for the News in 1911. It is a pleasure for me to read the News and see what my old friends are doing.

We are having a fine winter for here.
We have had no sleighing yet, and there has been no ice out here yet, but there are ten or twelve inches of ice on the ponds.

It is great sport to go fishing for mackerel through the ice. Each man is allowed ten lines. We cut holes in the ice and set the lines on what is called a trap; this has a spring that throws and lets a red flag go up. It is fine sport when they are biting good, but lots of work to cut the holes when the ice gets eighteen and twenty inches thick. It is no fishing for a lazy man. This is a great place, but there is no place like Old Kentucky.--R. E.
Herndon, Beverly, Mass.

In The Sunny South

Dear Mr. Babbage: Will you please send the News to me at Lakeland, Fla.
as I expect to spend the winter here.
We have a fine climate here. This country is certainly on the boom. When you hear anyone say the South is "behind time," you just tell them to come and see before they say that.--C. A.
Tinius.

PLANS TO STOP TIDE TO CITIES

Rudolph Spreckels Has Project For Prospective Farmers.

WOULD ENLIST CAPITAL'S AID.

Idea is to Have Wealthy Men Buy Up Desirable Land, Then Resell It on Long Payments So One Crop Failure
Will Not Entail Loss of Farm—Says
Capitalists Should Form a Fund.

Rudolph Spreckels, leader in the San Francisco anti-graft crusade, in addition to ideas for civic reform, has a plan for stemming the tide of the wave of population flowing toward the American cities with such alarming rapidity.

"The trouble with the back to the farm propaganda today," Mr. Spreckels says, "is that, while it distributes a lot of free advice to the residents of congested sections in our cities, it offers comparatively little aid of a substantial sort. I think that it is not because city dwellers prefer the cities to the country that they remain in a state of industrial dependence, but because they have not the capital required to buy a farm and the stock and implements necessary to make it a paying venture.

Thinks Fund Should Be Formed.

"I believe the capitalists of the United States should form a fund so that they could buy tillable land and then resell it to prospective emigrants from the cities at actual cost, with provision for easy terms of payment.
These payments could be so arranged as to extend over a period of fifty or even seventy years, so that there would be little question that the purchaser or his family would eventually own the land.

"As it is, many hesitate to leave their urban homes because farming is a great deal of a risk. They would be compelled to place heavy mortgages on their land, payable in a few years. Under this plan a series of unfortunate seasons would be fatal to the farmer, who would be unable to meet the demands of the incumbrance on his land and would thereby forfeit his holdings, together with the money he had expended in getting started.

Calls It Mistaken Plea.

"The plea to the man of the city to emigrate to the frontier to hew out a home for himself where land is cheap is mistaken. Pioneer life necessarily entails many hardships, which the city dweller and his wife cannot endure because they are not inured to them.
To a man who has been reared on a farm it is difficult enough to transform a stubborn prairie or a heavily wooded land into tillable land, but for the inexperienced farmer, recruited from the congested cities, it is almost impossible. After a few years he will get discouraged and return to his old home and work.

"Here is the difficulty, however. To embark on a farming venture in a district which is already cultivated and settled to some extent requires a big outlay of capital, whereas in pioneer regions land can be obtained either free or for a nominal sum. And this is where the capitalists should extend a helping hand.

Europe's Plan Succeeds.

"In many parts of Europe the plan of long payments for land is in operation and is proving a great success.
When the settlers are assured that in case of crop reverses they are not in danger of losing their homes and that

Women as Well as Men are Made Miserable by Kidney and Bladder Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased.

Kidney trouble has become so prevalent
that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh, or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of Rice in the Orient.

Rice is "wet," that grown for the most part in flooded land, or "dry," that raised on uplands. Its growth in those regions where civilization has penetrated least is pathetic. Parts of the east are still covered with virgin forest of tall trees. Underneath all is dark in heavy shade. Creepers twine up hundreds of feet and are all topped off with indescribable orchids, all hunting for air and sunshine. In the thick wood a suitable spot is chosen, for rice they must have or starve. Undergrowth is cut out and staked and hedged around to make a fence for the little rice farm.—Exchange.

PERSISTENT BEGGARS.

The More Egyptian Mendicants Get the More They Demand.

In Egypt one should never give baksheesh except for actual services rendered. Resist calmly but firmly every attempt at extortion. Never pay till the stipulated service is finished; then, after you have paid a little more than the bargain called for, turn a deaf ear to the protestations and entreaties that the more baksheesh you give the more "honorous" becomes the applicant. Real thanks and gratitude must not be expected for gifts.

A friend of mine once broke one of these rules just to see what would happen. As we passed through a little mud village twenty miles from Calcutta he gave a sturdy beggar a millime-half a cent. This beggar, accompanyed by others, followed us to the edge of the village, asking for more. My friend then gave him a shester (5 cents).

They followed us a hundred yards or so and were more persistent than before. When they showed a disposition to go back he gave them 5 plasters. They followed us half a mile and became very clamorous. I was afraid we should get into trouble and wanted him to stop it, but when they began to lag he gave them 20 plasters.

They followed us two miles, and the experiment might have ended seriously had we not met a company of stray-ers with a dragoman, who sent the beggars about their business. This may help you to understand Egyptian character.—Christian Herald.

DIDN'T WASTE WORDS.

The Stoical Mountaineer Simply Answered the Question.

"For stoical indifference and taciturnity," said a young man from Knoxville, Tenn., who was visiting in Louisville a few days ago, "I never saw any one that could equal the Kentucky mountaineer.

"Two years ago I was camping during the summer with a party of young men and women in the mountains.
During our stay there we became acquainted with an old mountaineer whom we called Sam. He always referred to his wife as 'Maria,' and we fell into the same habit.

"Last year we returned to the same place to camp. As we were going up the mountain path on our first day out we met Sam walking along apparently in a deep study.

"'Hello, Sam!' we all called. 'Where's Maria?'

"'She's comin' back there,' he said, directing his thumb backward over his shoulder.

"We went on up the mountain path and a short distance farther came upon a party of mountaineers Iran, ortng a dead body in a rickety wagon. It was a funeral party. Imagine our surprise when we were informed that the deceased was Maria. Sam had not thought it worth his pains to inform us that Maria was dead when he stated she was 'comin' back there.'—Louisville

GOOD ROAD BOOSTERS.

Valuable Hints From Address by Congressman Farria of Oklahoma.

Congressman Scott Farria of Oklahoma in an enthusiastic address on the subject of good roads uttered the following:

Good roads bring the products of the mine and forest to the factory door.

Good roads bring thrift to the farmer and thrift to the consumer and wealth to the nation.

Good roads make farm life pleasant and profitable and enhance its usefulness.

Good roads bring us more rural routes—will bring us better ones and more efficient ones.

They make better homes, happier families, more patriotic people.

They distribute the products of the mine, the forest and the factory.

They are the avenues of progress and the highest and best proof of the intelligence we enjoy.

It does justice to producer and consumer and withholds injustice from all.

They save time, labor, money and failure. They patronize the railways and the waterways you have appropriated for so lavishly.

Highways, I tell you, sir, are not the property of one class of men, but are the property and interest of every one, whether he be black or white, educated or uneducated, weak or strong, high or low, savage or civilized. They are, I tell you, the property of us all,
and we should all aid in their upbuilding.

A Dime Better Than Two Nickels.

A professional panhandler approached a man crossing City Hall park and demanded a nickel, which the man good naturedly handed out, saying, "I suppose that goes for a glass of beer."

"Surest thing you know," replied the panhandler unblushingly. "And, by the way, while we are on the subject, I have now in my possession two nickels. Would you mind giving me a ten cent piece for them?"

"I will on one condition," said the man, whose curiosity was aroused.
"What's the answer?"

"Well, you see, it's this way," explained the panhandler. "If I have a dime I go into a saloon and ask for beer. I have a nickel comeback, which enables me to amble over to the free lunch counter and fill up. Maybe you don't realize that getting change over the bar gives a man a certain tone that doesn't belong to him if he just coughs up a nickel."—New York Sun.

Good Road Legislation Needed.

"What we need in this country," says a good roads expert, "is legislators who are willing to sacrifice their political future in behalf of good roads. In thus dying politically they will have rendered more service to their country than by living many years. We like the temper of those Alabama folk who are demanding of candidates for office that they speak out plainly for better roads."

HAVE YOU TRIED PAXTINE

The Great Toilet Germicide?

You don't have to pay 50c or $1.00 a bottle for listerian antiseptics or peroxide. You can make 15 pint of more cleansing, germicidal, healing and deodorizing antiseptic solution with one 25c box of Paxtine.—a soluble antiseptic powder, obtainable at any drug store.
Paxtine destroys germs that cause disease, decay and odors—that is why it is the best mouth wash and gargle, and why it purifies the breath, cleanses and preserves the teeth better than ordinary dentifrices, and in sponge bathing it completely eradicates perspiration and other disagreeable body odors. Every dainty woman appreciates this and its many other toilet and hygienic uses.

Paxtine is splendid for sore throat, inflamed eyes and to purify mouth and breath after smoking. You can get Paxtine Toilet Antiseptic at any drug store, price 25c and 50c, or by mail postpaid from The Paxton Toilet Co., Boston, Mass., who will send you a free sample if you would like to try it before buying.

JACKS FOR SALE!

WE have three good Jacks we wish to dispose of. Two are three years old, and one two years old. They are nicely bred; all jet black with white points; very short and close hair; fine size; extremely heavy bone; large feet; big shapely heads and ears. These Jacks are in fine condition, and ready to show.

We are going to dispose of them, and they will be sold at bargains. We trust they will find homes in our county.

If you are interested, don't write, but come and see us.

Respectfully,

R. G. ROBERTSON & SONS,

STILL PLAN FEATS OF DARING IN AIR

Aviators Undaunted, Though Rendered More Cautious by Deaths of Moisant and Hoxsey.

Ely to fly from Land to Vessel, While Latham Will Try Antelope Hunting from Aeroplane.

By JAMES A. EDGERTON.
HAVING flown from the deck of a battleship to land, Eugene B. Ely, the aviator, became ambitious to reverse the process and fly from land to the deck of a battleship. So he arranged with the officials of the San Francisco aeronautical meet to skyplane out from the California shore to the armored cruiser Pennsylvania.

In some aspects this is the most sensational aeroplane feat yet undertaken. It is a brand new, twentieth century way of boarding a man-of-war. This being the month of the San Francisco meet, the thing is brought before us with all its startling reality. Mr. Ely has not only reversed his process of flight, but his position on the continent, the previous feat having been pulled off at Hampton Roads on the Atlantic coast. He has likewise reversed all previous human experience. The possibilities he has opened are staggering.

What is to prevent a flock of aeroplanes from boarding a battleship while the aeroplanists whip the crew before the jack taws recover from their astonishment? What is to prevent the sky passengers from dropping bombs on the admiral's head or blowing off the fighting tops and conning towers? It is plain to see that in future our fighting ships will have to be armored not only on the sides and ends, but on top.

Mr. Ely presents us a more pleasing prospect, however. Hereafter when an irate passenger loses his steamer, instead of jumping into the water or shaking his fist and hurling language at the disappearing liner, he can take an aeroplane and land on deck with the casual remark that he always takes ship that way.

Already Sensational Performer.

In Mr. Ely's previous flight he gave a bunch of Uncle Sam's naval officers and men the sensation of their lives. An inclined platform had been improvised on the deck of the Birmingham, and from this the venturesome aviator made his start. It was a windy and rainy morning, and for this reason few believed that the trip would be made. Almost before the onlookers knew it the biplane had left the ship, dipped until it actually grazed the water, then arose to a height of 200 feet and bore away to the faintly outlined Virginia shore, two and one-half miles distant.

Mr. Ely said that when he struck the water his propeller was slightly injured and he himself was blinded by the salt spray covering his goggles. When he had taken time to wipe off the moisture he was far aloft and flying like a bird.

The machine used was the same one in which Glenn H. Curtiss made the journey from Albany to New York. Ely always uses a Curtiss biplane and with it recently won a speed contest against a Wright machine.

It would have been a star idea if Ely had decided to take with him on his shore to battleship flight some of the San Francisco belles who eagerly accepted invitations to go aloft during the San Francisco meet. It would have opened a new era in the social annals of the navy. The custom, once having started, might have continued and expanded until Uncle Sam's crews could have looked forward to regular visits from the aeroplane girls' brigades that would literally drop in on them every time their ships got near shore.

Miss Sears Starts Fad.

It was Eleanor Sears of Boston and Newport who started the San Francisco society buds to aviating. Miss Sears was not the first woman to go aloft, but she was about the biggest social noise that had done so, and the sport was soon the fad of the smart set.

Aeroplaning is now in the acrobatic stage. Man, having found his wings, is trying them out and is doing all sorts of freak feats in sheer enjoyment of his new powers. This is especially true in America, where we are naturally more venturesome and where trick riding and circus stunts have been indulged to the limit and beyond. Aviators are agreed that to this fact is due many of the deaths that have cast a shadow upon the sport. Late on, let us hope, we shall settle down to a more serious and cautious gait. While this may not be as sensational or profitable, it will at least be better for the future of aviation and will not break so many necks.

The flight of Ely to the battleship is not exactly of the freak class, since it demonstrated possible uses for the aeroplane in war. But spiral drops, excessive altitude tests and other sensational riding contribute little to the science of aviation and only go to swell the prize money and the death list.

We need not be discouraged, however. Even the bird when he begins to fly has a few tumbles. If he, with tens of thousands of years of flying ancestors behind him, falls out of the nest and gets bumped in learning to use his wings what wonder that man, with no flying ancestors, should suffer a few mishaps!

Perhaps the blackest day in the history of American aviation was that on which two star bird men, Arch Hoxsey and John H. Moisant, met their death.

Moisant Proved Merit.

Moisant was comparatively new in the game, but his first big feat had centered on him the world's attention. This was a flight with a passenger from Paris to London. It was the first time such a feat had ever been attempted, and aviators agreed that it could not be done. To Moisant such an opinion acted as a challenge, and he immediately prepared to try it out. Taking with him a mechanic, a heavy man, he sailed over the city of Paris, the first time a flight with a passenger had ever been accomplished over that or any other big city then by continuous stages. He flew to the coast, over the English channel and within twenty miles of London, when a broken propeller forced him to wait for repairs. He was fortunate after a misfortune occurred when he kept on with damaged propeller until at last he landed in London.

Moisant's great victory in America was that of winning the prize for the quickest flight from Belmont park around the statue of Liberty and return. That feat was even more daring and thrilling than the Paris-London feat in air. He said that at that point the aviator seemed to lose control of the machine, which then came down as swiftly as if it were falling and apparently without a master. Glenn H. Curtiss held a similar view, although he did not believe that death had actually taken place aloft, but rather that Hoxsey had been stricken by aviation sickness, due to swift change of altitude, and had become unconscious.

Charles S. Willard, who had been up on the same day, returned to the earth with the statement that no money would tempt him to ascend again, as he had found "the atmosphere as full of holes as a Swiss cheese." His theory was that Hoxsey had fallen into one of these holes in the air and had been unable to right his machine.

Held Altitude Record.

Hoxsey was a high type of aviator, keen and intelligent. His daring is exemplified by the fact that a forty mile gale was blowing at the time he broke the world's altitude record. He then went up 11,474 feet, or over two miles. He is the man who made the great cross country flight from Springfield, Ill., to St. Louis and who took Theodore Roosevelt up for his famous flight.

As a result of these and other fatal accidents, which spread a pall over the aviation sky in 1910, a conservative movement is on foot. Cortland Field Bishop, first vice president of the Aero Club of America, is out in an appeal for more caution and for useful results rather than spectacular effects. Following the death of Hoxsey, Wilbur Wright wired to his manager on the Pacific coast to instruct the other Wright fliers to attempt no more sensational or record breaking efforts, but to confine themselves to straightaway flights.

Despite the death list the record of 1910 is the most brilliant in the history of aviation. The number of machines flight. His two competitors were an Englishman and Frenchman, each with a 100 horsepower motor. When Moisant, discovered that no American was entered he hastily bought a fifty horsepower machine from a brother aviator and although he was a stranger to its mechanism he entered the race without an initial trial flight and won it.

Moisant Proved Nerve.

For sheer nerve there has probably been nothing in aviation quite like it. The machine cost him $10,000, which he had to pay on a mere chance. Then he faced a long flight in an untried machine over a populous city and a large body of water. On the start he encountered a stiff breeze, but took it at an angle. He won by working out a theory and following it. On the way to the statue he mounted rapidly until at one time he was 2,800 feet high. Then he coasted back, with the wind behind him and his motor going full force, at times reaching the marvelous speed of eighty miles an hour. He came in less than a minute ahead of his nearest rival, Claude Grahame White of England.

At the time of his death Moisant was preparing to enter the contest for the Michelin prize at New Orleans. He had placed a heavy gasoline tank in front of his engine, and this may have caused the disaster. At any rate, after a successful flight from the city to the aviation grounds, some miles distant, he was preparing to flight. When about twenty-five feet high his machine suddenly pitched forward and hurled the aviator from his seat as though from a catapult. Moisant struck the soft ground on his head. His neck was instantly broken.

His was a daring spirit. Before becoming an aviator he had been a Central American revolutionist. Personally he was a slight, almost shy man, but adventure was his meat and drink and danger his element. It was the hazard of the sport that drew him to aviation.

Hoxsey Plunged From the Clouds.

Arch Hoxsey's death came at almost the same hour and in a similar manner. It occurred at the Los Angeles meet, where a few days before Hoxsey had circled above Mount Wilson in a sensational flight and earlier still had broken the world's altitude record. On the fatal trip Hoxsey's machine glided swiftly down from an altitude of 7,000 feet. When within a short distance of the earth and while the crowd was cheering it began to turn over and over and fell a mass of wreckage with the dead aviator plumed beneath the engine.

Hoxsey's mechanic gave it as his opinion that the aeromut had died from the swift descent while still 2,000 feet in air. He said that at that point the aviator seemed to lose control of the machine, which then came down as swiftly as if it were falling and apparently without a master. Glenn H. Curtiss held a similar view, although he did not believe that death had actually taken place aloft, but rather that Hoxsey had been stricken by aviation sickness, due to swift change of altitude, and had become unconscious.

Charles S. Willard, who had been up on the same day, returned to the earth with the statement that no money would tempt him to ascend again, as he had found "the atmosphere as full of holes as a Swiss cheese." His theory was that Hoxsey had fallen into one of these holes in the air and had been unable to right his machine.

Hunts From Aeroplane.

Following his successful attempts to shoot ducks from his monoplane, Hubert Latham says that this year he will go after big game, such as antelope. Several Frenchwomen have become experts at the sport, one remaining aloft recently nearly an hour. Feminine aviators promise to become a fixed feature of the sport during the coming twelve months. The year is young, and as the whole world has turned its thoughts to flying who can tell what progress will be made before the advent of 1921?

Among the dead Moisant's effects was found a pathetic letter to his son advising him "against the fascination that attracts you to the life of a bird man." It was the natural cry of a father's heart and revealed the fact that Moisant was not the reckless operator he had been pictured, but one who realized the perils of the air.

Despite the warning it is safe to say that thousands of other young men will harness the air and ride the winds this year and coming years. Man has tried his wings, and the flying fever is in his veins. One hopeful fact is that the Wright brothers, the inventors of the aeroplane and still the kings of the air, are among the living and may be trusted to guide and develop the art until finally it gives us a comparatively safe and general mode of travel.

Learns by Eating His Name.

A Servian teacher, M. Medakovich, has instituted the most successful method of teaching yet discovered. In his school each pupil is provided with a chocolate alphabet, and as soon as he can put his name together correctly he is allowed to eat it. Word making is taught on the same plan. M. Medakovich's pupils on an average can read fluently in three days.

SUPT. DRISKELL'S VISIT TO THE SCHOOLS.

Andrew Driskell, County Superintendent of Schools, has finished his itinerary and visited 109 schools, having been twice to sixteen of them. His work this term has been exceedingly pleasant though very disappointing in many respects.

o o o

The attendance was poor. Nine years ago when Supt. Driskell filled the duties of this same office, there were 3000 children attending school in the county; this term he saw only 27 of these same children in school. Some of the three thousand completed their education, but 2000 of them dropped school in the prime of their youth to enter different fields of work, wholly unequipped for them. In one part of the county during the fall, Supt. Driskell walked through the fields from one school house to another and counted 63 boys hunting and 57 boys present at school.

At McDaniels and West View the boys outnumber the girls. Cloverport has a fair attendance of boys and there seems to be an increased interest in education on the part of the boys—notwithstanding they would rather hunt than study.

o o o

Not until Breckenridge county has the Compulsory School Law, will there be any vast improvement in the rural and town schools, said Supt. Driskell. He is anxious for this, and in truth, here lies the only relief from the burden of illiteracy the state has shouldered so long.

o o o

More interest was shown in Stephensport by the parents and patrons than the other places Supt. Driskell visited. The mothers and fathers who elicit their co-operation with the teachers are doing much to promote educational progress. Those who force their children to attend every day and who visit the teacher and schools occasionally, have a wonderful influence in awakening a popular interest in the schools in the communities in which they live. The boys and girls who hold on when others in the class let go, are nine out of ten, those who have parents to push them on, who urge them at home to "go", who teach them there are no such words as "quitting school."

o o o

Supt. Driskell said that few school rooms have been remodeled, most of them having the same old benches and stoves that were in them nine years ago. However, this year some of the teachers have been giving entertainments to make funds for the purpose of repairing the school houses and their success was noted with delight.

o o o

Supt. Driskell's pet ambition is The County High School. He is working enthusiastically for a larger number of pupils from the different towns and rural routes to attend. Custer leads with a larger list of scholars and her representatives have the reputation of being the brightest scholars in the High School.

o o o

Agriculture and domestic science should be taught in Breckenridge county schools. Mr. Driskell thinks the young people should be educated to appreciate the soil and the timber, and to take care of every foot of it. He thinks Kentucky would have been far better off, had she instilled in her children years ago, to seek education, to till well their fields instead of making whisky and raising horses to boast of—had this been the case she would have had twice as many pretty daughters and excellent sons to make her proud.

Supt. Driskell used to tell a story that no one could let someone else eat his dinner and get the benefits, neither could the boy depend on another to learn his lesson and obtain results. This can be well applied by the thoughtful and public-spirited men and women in every section of the state. Each man has a personal work to do for the betterment of the schools. And if this is done, Kentucky will not in the future starve for educational capacities.

Our good friend, Jerry Tilford, is suffering a general break down in health and has been compelled to drop his work. He has been conductor on the Branch ever since it was built and no employee on the Henderson route has been more faithful than Mr. Tilford.

We want to thank our correspondents for the interest they have been taking in gathering the news and getting new subscribers for our paper. Our hearts are always gladdened over your hearty co-operation.

Mr. and Mrs. Jess Eskridge were called to Princeton Thursday to attend the funeral of Mrs. Eskridge's father.

John W. Cook, who died very suddenly at his home in Princeton.

C. H. Schaefflin, who was here through last season at the Experiment farm, came down from Lexington for a short visit.

Judge Moorman was in Louisville last week adjusting the fire loss of Glasscock & Co., who last fall were burned out at Glendene.

Marcellus Butler has moved from town to a farm two miles away. The house he vacated on Louisville street will be occupied by Herbert Hall, who returns from Garfield to take a position as implement salesman with B. F.

Beard & Co.

Cleveland Brock, until recently with Heston, Whitworth & Co., has taken charge of the Fourth District Leader as editor and business manager. Mr. Brock will use an energy such as only an honest, ambitious, painstaking, conscientious, hard working young man can use. He has made good in all else he has undertaken, and we predict for him the same sort of result in the newspaper field.

Dave Walls, Stanley Gray, Gliber Kirtley and Guy Springgate went to Custer Friday to attend the funeral of Miss Daisy Trent.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Hensley, and son, of Stanley, were here several days visiting Mrs. Lucetta Hensley.

The Board of Supervisors will reassemble on Jan. 23, when they will hear complaints from the 225 whom they propose to raise in the First District; on the 24th they will hear the 150 in the Second; on the 25th the 87 in the Third; on the 26th the 139 in the Fourth; and on the 27th the 75 in the Fifth, and the 150 in the Sixth.

Louisville Market Report

Louisville, Jan. 19.—Cattle—There were 1,567 cattle on sale yesterday, a moderate supply, and with a fairly good attendance of buyers the market ruled just about steady with the close of last week. Desirable butcher cattle were in active demand, not enough of that class to go around; the medium and common kinds were just about steady, but a trifle slow. Good demand for feeders and stockers at steady to firm prices. Bulls firm; canners slow; milch cows unchanged. Not many heavy cattle here yesterday.

Calves—Receipts 150 head. The market ruled about steady; the best $8@8.50; some fancy higher; medium $6@8; common $2.50@6.

Hogs—Receipts 3,489 head. The market was rather slow in opening, and prices 20c lower on all grades; selected hogs of all weights selling at $7.90; roughs out at $7.30 down. The pens were well cleared of good hogs, and the market closed steady at the decline.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts 42 head. The market ruled steady, the best butcher lambs $5@5.50; some fancy higher; medium and culls $3@5; fat sheep $2.50@3; medium and common sheep slow at $1@2.50.

By permission of my employer, the Sheriff, I am going to extend the time for the final payment of taxes in this district one more month, JUST THIRTY SHORT DAYS. At the end of that time, which will be Feb. 1, 1911, I am going to advertise every man's, woman's or child's list that is left on my books on that day unpaid.

Now, if you think I am not in earnest about this matter just let the time pass and see what the result will be, but I would much rather you stop this right now because it only means additional cost to you.

If you let this time pass you need not blame me when you are forced to pay several dollars cost. This will be my last appeal for 1910 taxes but it will appear just as many times as there are issues of the Breckenridge News between now and the 1st day of February, 1911.

JIMMY VALENTINE, WARDEN HANDLER AND ROSE LANE.

of you... come to see me once... I grab you by mistake on suspicion." "To — with you!" snarled Avery, turning away and facing the warden. "I've got the regular state allowance for released prisoners coming to me, ain't I?" "Yes," answered Handler, "and you take it and get out of here, you crook! Here, sign this" (he showed him a paper). "If you can write. If you can't, why, make your mark." The warden handed over a bill. The departing man scanned the greenback deprecatingly. "Five dollars," he cried, "and this suit of clothes that a country constable could see the Sing Sing tag on in the night! Pretty good for eight years and ten months' work, eh? And you guys are my friends! For God's sake, let me get out of here, where there are men who don't live on the mistakes of some one else." He wheeled toward the door and disappeared. "There's one more we've got to keep track of," commented Doyle. "He'll be at work in a week," said Handler laconically. "Yes, and I'll nail him and give him back to you." "I don't want him," the warden put in hastily. "I just might make it tough for him if he was sent back. I thought he had come to his senses and would help you against Valentine, but he's just a plain fool." "And all alike—all hating us for their fall," the detective seated himself as he spoke. "He can't work now; he's too old. The game as he knew it was the yegg game." Handler also had resumed his seat, and he leaned over his desk and said significantly: "So you're afraid Valentine will get a new trial, eh? There's some class to Valentine. Have a smoke." The prison master held out a box of perfection from which Doyle gratefully extracted a weed. "Thanks," mumbled the detective. "Valentine is the only high class crook I ever knew that I couldn't catch and put away for keeps. There's nothing of a mystery about him. He'd get away with the Raffles game a high society in a walk. The swell James would go daffy over his good looks and his tony manners and his pleasing voice. Yet he has trailed along with the toughest gang in the business," Doyle paused, then said, "And yet he says he is innocent, I suppose."

"Yes," put in Handler, leaning comfortably in his chair. "Said so last time I talked with him. This prison is killing him. He doesn't like it. He can't stand it. His nerves will stick out through his skin if they jump much more."

"He's the one fellow I think this life would cure. He's a wonder."

"At safe, you mean," was Handler's sarcastic rejoinder.

Little did the warden and the detective realize as they sat and schemed to bring about the further and complete ruin of Jimmy Valentine that there's a divinity that shapes our ends, rough hew them how we will, and this influence is not denied to those who languish forlorn and hopeless in prison cells.

Little did they know that it might be Jimmy Valentine, No. 1289, who was to teach them that the soul of a man is an unquenchable spark that not even years of oppression and degradation can lastingly dim when the spirit wills that they shall not.

And just now there came a knocking at the warden's door that portended much for No. 1289.

The warden's secretary went to the door opening from the office into a waiting room where visitors were received. He returned to announce, "Some members of the Gate of Hope society, and they have the lieutenant governor and his niece with them."

"The lieutenant governor?" ejaculated Handler. "Fay?"

"Yes."

"What's the Gate of Hope?" asked Doyle.

"A gang of women tryin' to release from prison convicts they believe are innocent," said the warden.

The detective smiled.

At Handler's order Smith summoned the callers, Doyle making his exit. "The lieutenant governor," pondered Handler. "I wonder if there's any leak about those contracts for supplies."

Mrs. Moore and Mrs. Webster of the society, middle aged women of pleasing appearance, came in, followed by Rose Lane, the lieutenant governor's niece, and that official himself. Miss Lane, a young girl of unmistakable charm and beauty, held close to her uncle's side.

"Mr. Handler," spoke Mrs. Webster, "we come today with a famous humanitarian, Lieutenant Governor Fay," she pronounced, inclining toward that official.

"Governor," said the warden, howling. The lieutenant governor shook Handler's hand and presented his niece. The party seated themselves, facing the warden.

"We have come here today," said Mrs. Moore, "to again ask that men be not forced to make confessions while imprisoned here that may be used against them when they leave here. We understand that through the pressure that can be brought to bear on the inmates in these institutions they can be made willing to confess to crimes they never committed." "What do you mean?" queried Handler.

"Oh, we understand that by depriving prisoners of their proper allowance of food and of small privileges they are allowed, and by bullying conduct on the part of the men in charge of them the inmates can be led to make false confessions involving themselves or others. This information is used against the men after they are released as well as against men who are at large whom the police desire to incriminate."

"No one is ever forced to confess anything here, madam," protested Handler.

"But I know!"

"Pardon me, Mrs. Moore," interrupted the lieutenant governor, rising. "I do not think that in your zeal you realize what you are saying." He addressed the warden. "It seems, however, that these well meaning ladies have evidence that a certain man here did confess some offense to us—"

"To a stool," commented Handler. "Am I responsible for the detectives who have men working inside the prison for them?"

"By a stool you mean?"

"A stool pigeon, a decoy. They win the confidence of prisoners and tell what they learn to the detectives."

Mrs. Moore here went on to state that in Sing Sing and in all prisons were confined many innocent men and that in any event released men should be encouraged to live honestly, should be given a chance. They ought not to be pursued and hounded into being spies by detectives anxious to make a record for securing convictions regardless of the truth of the testimony. One reason the woman advanced for her stand was that a man who became a spy or decoy must associate continually with men and women of questionable character, thus rendering it impossible to secure or much less remain in honest employment.

"Bosh!" exclaimed Handler as she ceased. "These folks we get don't want to live straight, won't live straight, can't live straight when they get on the outside. First, they're all lazy; second, most of them are insane."

"What would you call a man," continued the warden, "who does something the law forbids, does it whenever the opportunity offers without a chance of gain? What do you call a man who does a thing for the love of it?"

"An artist," answered Mrs. Webster.

"Artist! Then I've got a lot of them," laughed Handler sarcastically. "Well, to me they're insane."

To Rose Lane the adventure was extremely interesting. Finally succeeding in gaining her uncle's consent to her accompanying him on a visit to the great prison, she was now seeing a little section of the darker side of life which appealed strongly to her imaginative nature. Her cheeks flushed with the excitement of the occasion, this voyage into this famous tomb of living dead men.

As the warden finished she exclaimed, "I once had an experience with a burglar, mad!"

"Did he take your jewels?" asked Mrs. Moore sympathetically.

"No. I was in the parlor car in daylight. I was the only person in the car, and this man walked up and accosted me. I reached for the bell for the porter. He struck my wrist. Then he sat on the arm of my chair. He wanted to talk to me, he said. I scarcely knew what to do when a younger man, evidently a gentleman, walked in from the smoking compartment and, taking the man by the arm, led him away."

"How do you know the man was a burglar?" asked the lieutenant governor.

"Listen. I had no more than got my breath when the man came back. He

"HE WAS TALL AND HAD BLOND HAIR," threw his arms about my shoulders and again sat on the chair arm. When I reached for the bell he struck my arm. I screamed. The gentleman who had taken him away before ran into the car, and they fought. I was petrified with fright. The gentleman was much the smaller, and it seemed he would surely be killed when suddenly by some trick he sent the man crashing through the Pullman window. I read in the paper the next day that a famous burglar was found with his skull fractured near the tracks."

A strange light came into Handler's eyes. Was it possible, he thought, that so strange a coincidence—"Did that occur in this state?" he asked quickly.

"Yes," between Buffalo and Rochester two years ago in June."

The warden compressed his lips firmly.

"Was the dead burglar's name Cotton?" he interrogated earnestly.

"Yes; that's what the papers said. Did you know him?"

"Had him here for five years once. Odd, but we heard he was killed trying to get on a moving train. And, by the way, his particular pal is now in this prison doing ten—safe breaking. His name is Valentine. The story you tell is a brand new one on us."

"And you never saw again the gentleman who rescued you?" queried Mrs. Moore of Miss Lane.

"Never." Into the young girl's face came an expression of mingled sweetness and regret. The woman's question seemed to revive in her the memories of a voice and face and a manner and a personality which somehow she had never been quite able to forget.

"We sat and talked for a few minutes," she finally went on. "He told me that there were reasons why he could not let me know who he was and that he could never see me again, though I wanted him to meet my family to receive their thanks for what he had done. He was very nervous, but he had amazing strength for one of his build, as his handling of that ruf-fan showed. When he shook hands with me I noticed that his hands were very white and smooth and sensitive."

The warden was now leaning over his desk, intent on the girl's words.

"I noticed that he had the habit of frequently pressing one hand nervously into the other, and—" "He was tall, and he had blond hair," interjected the warden.

The girl gazed at Handler in open mouthed astonishment.

CHAPTER III.

WARDEN HANDLER, regretting that he had given his visitors an indication that he believed he had recognized

Rose Lane's deliverer, answered the questions of the girl and the lieutenant governor by stating: "The man is as bad as the burglar he threw out of the car window—even worse. He's in this prison at this moment, I firmly believe, according to the description we've just heard."

"Oh, impossible!" exclaimed Miss Lane, her face coloring. "He was a gentleman, a thorough gentleman, and too young to be a hardened criminal." Her face became shadowed with concern.

The warden was vastly amused at this remark, which the young girl rendered with the finality of unquestioned authority.

"Too young!" he laughed. "Age doesn't cut any figure in crime the way you mean. It's some of these young fellows that will take a chance at anything. You see, they're ambitious. They're anxious to rise in their business."

The warden paused and glanced from the girl to the observing lieutenant governor, then to the two members of the Gate of Hope. He commented on the fact that his visitors had disagreed with him on various points and informed them that he had determined to offer them a few object lessons, lessons with living models. "I'll show you," he said, "that these crooks we've got here will ply their trade at all times, whether they profit or not; that, in short, criminality is a mania with them and that there's no use in trying to better them." His first exhibit, brought in by the secretary, was the celebrated forger "Blinkey" Davis. At the warden's request Lieutenant Governor Fay drew a check for $5 and handed it to Blinkey. To oblige the warden Blinkey, aided by a knife and pen and ink, in five minutes had "raised" it to the amount of $50,000. The lieutenant governor pronounced it perfect. "I know where I could pass it, too," laughed Blinkey as he was led away.

"I had him on the books once, and he couldn't resist raising the prison checks," chuckled Handler. "I could bring in fellows like that all day." He picked up an object from his desk. "Do you see this lock? A German inventor waiting outside has spent fourteen years in perfecting that. He claims it cannot be opened without the key. The prison board has accepted it for use here if the claims made for it are true. We have a man here paralyzed on one side, a sneaky thief, BLINKEY DAVIS RAISED THE CHECK TO $50,000.

I have sent for him. He may not open it, but he will try, for he cannot resist the criminal mania that controls him. Smith," to his secretary, "get the Dutchman; also the gentleman known as 'Dick the Rat.'"

When the decrepit form of "Dick the Rat" was brought in, together with the patient inventor Blackendolfebach, he was given the lock, three minutes and a hairpin. Ten seconds before his allotted time expired he threw the lock, opened, on the warden's desk, and with his repulsive, seamy face contorted into what was considered a smile he inclined his head to one side. From his throat came inarticulate squeals of glee—exactly the squeals of a rat.

Only the watchfulness of Smith saved the "Rat" from the violent, despairing onslaught of the German, who screamed: "I'll kill him! He ruin me! Und mit a hairpin, mein Gott!"

"You're not the first man to be ruined by a hairpin," laughed the warden. "Don't tell your wife."

Smith sent the inventor to the railroad station in charge of a guard and consigned the grinning Blinkey to the cell that had long been his home. On returning to the office the secretary said: "I've brought Valentine along too. I thought you might want him to open the safe."

A disturbed expression came into the prison master's face. He glanced quickly at Fay and his niece, then talked in an undertone with his aid. He was interrupted by Mrs. Webster.

"Lame Leg Well"

"I wish to say that I have used Sloan's Liniment on a lame leg that has given me much trouble for six months. It was so bad that I couldn't walk sometimes for a week. I tried doctors' medicine and had a rubber bandage for my leg, and bought everything that I heard of, but they all did me no good, until at last I was persuaded to try Sloan's Liniment. The first application helped it, and in two weeks my leg was well."—A. L. HUNTER, of Hunter, Ala.

"The two you have shown us do not entirely prove your argument, Mr. Warden," she said doubtfully. "They are the very lowest types in the prison. You argue a general premise from two individual cases. We do not maintain that such apparent criminals as we have seen should be liberated, but"—she turned to Fay—"there are gentlemen here, governor, men of quite a different type than these, whom one never sees."

"Warden," said the lieutenant governor, "I fear the ladies have more interest in the more romantic types of criminals—poets, for instance."

Mrs. Moore rose indignantly. "I shall make note of that frivolous speech in my report," she snapped.

Handler thought of Valentine, who was being detained outside. He would give his visitors their wish, as Fay seemed greatly interested. He would show them his prize exhibit. In spite of a belief that was taking a strong hold on his brain he would take a chance on displaying the unique abilities of No. 1289.

He well knew what to do should complications ensue. There were dark cells in Sing Sing for convicts the warden could decide to be merely. These were damp, dark cells below the level of the rushing river, relics of years when the state had little money and little thought for those held to have broken its laws. There were cells with "straitjackets," where a man could be trussed up with straps fixed to the walls, like a suckling pig in a market window, only his toes touching the floor. Anyway No. 1289 was already discredited.

"Get Valentine!" he gruffly said to Smith. "Well, governor," he continued in a more amiable tone, "I'll give you and the ladies a romantic type. He's not a poet, but he is doing ten years here for opening a bank safe without tools or the combination, simply by sense of touch. There is some poetry in that."

"Impossible!" commented Fay. "Well, the bank safe was opened and the money stolen, and his pal peached."

The door at the right of the office leading in from the corridors of cells opened. In came Smith, followed by a young man whose convict's garb could not overshadow the intelligence that shined in his ashen face. Clearly the prison air was working its baneful penalty on him with more success than usual in the case of men who entered the institution in good health. Vaguely conscious that there were visitors present, No. 1289 stood before the warden with his eyes directed toward the floor. His shoulders were square, he was of good height, with a figure which yet bore indications that he had been athletic in his free days. When he had entered the room the lieutenant governor had noticed that the convict walked with a free, manly stride, having no semblance to the shuffling prison slouch of his fellow inmates.

"Permit me," Handler addressed his visitors, with an elaborate gesture, "to present Mr. Jimmy Valentine. He's put more time locks on the retired list than any three men in the whole place, and when it comes to the fancy 'getaway' only a cross-eyed copper can keep tabs on him."

tion was lost on Rose Lane. She caught a glimpse of the face of the man in felon's stripes. She leaned to one side to make certain. Yes; now she could not possibly be mistaken. She extended her hand spasmodically and clutched the lieutenant governor's arm.

"Uncle, uncle," she said chokingly. "It is he!"

"What's the matter, child?" was Fay's anxious response.

"That is the man who saved me!" the excited young girl gasped. "That is the man who threw the burglar through the express train window!"

The warden's shifting eye caught the agitated movement of Rose Lane as Jimmy Valentine was brought in, and he quickly resolved on a course of procedure that would place the young prisoner in as bad a light as possible.

As for the lieutenant governor, he was almost as astonished as Rose at the unexpected denouement, and he quietly insisted that she say nothing more about the subject and calm herself. So far as outward manifestations were concerned, the girl followed this advice fairly well, but her heart pounded uncontrollingly, her pulse throbbing correspondingly, and a wave of deepest pity surged over her as she realized the horrible lot to which had been condemned the hero of the one great adventure of her life, the gallant Prince Charming of the only romance in which she had ever played a part.

The lieutenant governor addressed the prisoner:

"How do you do, sir?"

Valentine swung around and faced the speaker. He realized that he could no longer conceal his features from the spectator. He pressed his hands nervously together and looked his questioner squarely in the eyes.

"How do you do, sir?" he said in a low voice.

FREE ADVICE TO WOMEN

Women suffering from any form of illness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass. All letters are received, opened, read and answered by women. A woman can freely talk of her private illness to a woman; this has been established between Mrs. Pinkham and the women of America which has never been broken.

Never has she published a testimonial or used a letter without the written consent of the writer, and never has the Company allowed these confidential letters to get out of their possession, as the hundreds of thousands of them in their files will attest.

Out of the vast volume of experience which Mrs. Pinkham has to draw from, it is more than possible that she has gained the very knowledge needed in your case. She asks nothing in return except your good will, and her advice has helped thousands. Surely any woman, rich or poor, should be glad to take advantage of this generous offer of assistance. Address Mrs. Pinkham, care of Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

Every woman ought to have Lydia E. Pinkham's 80-page Text Book. It is not a book for general distribution, as it is too expensive. It is free and only obtainable by mail. Write for it today.

Handier was watching the exchange of greetings with keen interest.

"Met before, governor, have you?" he asked ingenuously.

"No," responded Fay. "But I'm glad to see you have some types here different than 'Dick the Rat' and—"

"Yes," broke in the warden. "Here, Jimmy, there's something gone wrong with the office safe. Open it for me, will you?"

Fay fastened a penetrating gaze on Valentine.

The prisoner turned his face away and toward the warden.

"I'll do so very gladly if I can. What is the combination?"

"Combination!" exploded the warden, staring at the prisoner.

Valentine was as cool and as insistent as though he were an employer talking with one of his clerks.

"Yes, the combination. How can you expect me to open the safe without it? Why, Mr. Warden, you must be joking with me."

Rose Lane smiled complacently into the lieutenant governor's face.

Handier's face became red—a deep red that threatened any moment to merge into a rich grape purple hue.

"You go at that safe and open it just like you need the coin!" he shouted.

Valentine made a deprecatory gesture.

"You flatter me," he answered, and he smiled a most aggravating smile that caused the now thoroughly aroused prison master to pound his desk and hoarsely cry:

"Flatter he d—! You do as I say or I'll give you the—"

Handier caught himself just in time. He suddenly remembered that the lieutenant governor was present.

"Say, Valentine," he substituted for his intended threat of the straitjacket, "you're fourflushing because there's a gallery present, eh?"

No. 1280 turned and surveyed the visitors present. His gaze passed from the lieutenant governor to the two members of the Gate of Hope society. Then in the background, half crouched into one of the uncomfortable wooden chairs that adorned the warden's office, he saw a girlish figure. He leaned forward involuntarily, for he saw a face and a pair of large brown eyes fixed steadfastly upon him. He recognized the girl as the one he had saved from the remorseless clutches of Billy Cotton—Cotton, whom he had thrown to his death through the window of a transcontinental flier. But only for a moment did Jimmy Valentine falter. With masterful control he wheeled to face the warden. "You are wrong again," he said evenly to Handier. "You know I am not what you would have these people think I am."

Now the grape purple began to show in the warden's face. The thick veins in his neck began to thicken still more and to crowd his low collar for space.

"You better do as I ask, Valentine," he warned.

"I know that every one here knows that, but—"

"You're doing ten for opening a bank safe and you can't open an old safe like mine?" The warden was sneering.

"I never opened that bank safe. You know that."

"You're going to pose, eh? Well, listen, you go and 'top that gopher' or I'll give you solitaire for a month."

Handier was now at his worst. A mouth of "solitaire!" A month, thirty days, thirty nights, alone, save for the rats and the river tide that seeped between the stones!

"It is an impossibility for any one to open a safe without the combination. I regret I cannot do as you ask."

Handier forgot the presence of the lieutenant governor and of the ladies. "Get out of here, you!"

Mrs. Webster stepped forward protestingly.

Fay determined to take a hand.

"You're losing your temper, warden," he began when he saw the prisoner step to the door through which he had come. "Just a moment," Fay said commandingly to the convict. "I forgot your name."

The prisoner halted. He saw that the speaker had come across to the middle of the office. "My name is Valentine, sir," he responded.

"With your permission, warden, I will speak further with this young man," Fay directed at Handier.

"Aw, he's making a grand stand play because there is some one here."

"And you?"

Handier was apologetic.

"I've only—"

"If you please, I should like to talk to Valentine," spoke Fay coldly.

"All right, go ahead. He's waiting to talk."

"Valentine," said the lieutenant governor, "can you not as a favor to us, a lot of skeptics, open the prison safe?"

The prisoner came toward the office of the state.

"If the warden will favor me with the combination I will try."

Handier broke in, "You fourflushing!"

"And without it?" continued Fay.

"I could no more do it than you can."

"Were you not convicted for doing just what we ask?"

"Yes, sir, on the evidence of a dyluc crook and—"

"That'll do, Valentine," interrupted the warden.

"One moment, Mr. Handier," said Fay, raising his hand. "You were about to say, Valentine?"

"Nothing, sir."

"I want you to talk."

"I would rather not."

Rose Lane had risen from her chair. She advanced and grasped her un-

HIGHWAYS TOO WIDE.

Those of Germany Compared to Roads of the West.

It is argued that as a general thing and particularly in the west the roads of the United States are too wide. The west and Germany are compared in this respect. It is pointed out that while in Germany, where the traffic is enormous, the highways are but twenty and twenty-one feet, in the west, where the traffic is comparatively light and land worth $100 an acre, the roadways are from fifty to sixty feet in width, three-fourths of which grows up in weeds and grass.

It can hardly be said, however, that the roads are too wide in the eastern states.

Mountain travelers especially will smile at the idea of wide roads in reading of the subject, having many a time and oft met face to face other travelers far from the "wide place," with the result that their vehicles had to be taken apart and carried by piece-meal or stood up at a dizzy angle against the cliff while the other hugged the perilous edge of a fathomless ravine.

FIGHTING FATIGUE.

Jacking Up the Tired System Without Using Stimulants.

If efforts to keep at work are continued in spite of fatigue the quality of the work is poor and the exhaustion luridate. Students constantly make this error and do all sorts of things to keep awake to burn the midnight oil when if they would go to bed and rest they could accomplish far more in half the time in the morning with little or no fatigue.

Yet there are times when sleepiness and fatigue must be overcome without resort to stimulants which injure the judgment. The tired physician with a critical case, for instance, must have his wits about him, and it will aid him vastly to go to an open window every fifteen or thirty minutes to take a dozen or two deep inspirations of cold air. His exhaustion in the end will be great, but he can make it up later.

As a matter of fact, surgeons and others whose work requires the keenest perceptions instinctively choose the early morning for their best efforts, reserving the afternoon for "low pressure" tasks or recreation. That is, it is far better to so live that we do not need the stimulus of these extraordinary methods of respiration.—American Medicine.

AN ORIENTAL GARDEN.

It is Not Planted With Flowers, and It Has No Lawns.

A garden does not necessarily mean a collection of flowers arranged more or less symmetrically, with spaces of lawn, shelter of trees and paths hither and thither. There have been gardens that, beyond a terra cotta jar or two holding a rosebush or a flowering almond, have had no green thing within their gates.

I know of an oriental garden in Fez where white garmented Moors come in the cool of the evening to sit and listen to ancient stories that they know by heart, or to music that was old when the pyramids were new, or perhaps to look at a dancing girl or two taking soft steps while they smoke their nargiles, yet that garden is nothing more than a series of arches upholding walls beyond walls, lined a faint, mysterious yellow that is not yellow, but white, and yet not white, but rose. In the middle is a pool of water in a stone basin that looks blue because of the intense sky overhead and that shimmers with gold in reflections from the walls.

In the corner stands a mighty jar full of strange scarlet blossoms, and rugs of deep color and intricate pattern lie on the sun warmed flags. There is always the fairy music of dropping water, and wonderful shadows move among the arches.

This place is a garden for all that it is so builded of man. The word court will not do for it.—Century Magazine.

Many a Cloverport Citizen Knows How Sure They Are.

Nothing uncertain about the work of Doan's Kidney Pills in Cloverport. There is plenty of positive proof of this in the testimony of citizens. Such evidence should convince the most skeptical doubter. Read the following statement:

J. C. Weatherholt, High St., Cloverport, Ky., says: "Two years ago I did not think it possible that I could ever be well again. In fact, I had settled up my affairs. I cannot fully describe the misery I endured from pains through my back. Whenever I stooped, the pains became so sharp that it really felt as if someone were thrusting a knife into my kidneys. I was often very dizzy, dark spots floated before my eyes and I had to grasp something to keep from falling. My joints became swollen to twice their natural size and I lost weight rapidly until I was a mere skeleton. The doctors' medicines and the many guaranteed cures that I tried, did not help me and finally it was my good fortune to hear about Doan's Kidney Pills. I immediately procured a box at Fisher's Drug Store and I was greatly surprised with the results received. Before I had taken the contents of the second box, there was a marked improvement and I continued using them until I was completely cured. I am now well and I give Doan's Kidney Pills the credit."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Going Like Wild Fire

That's the way to describe the wide-spread demand for

Walter Wellman's Great Book

The Aerial Age

One critic calls it a "Fascinating Record of Scientific Adventure"; another compares it to "a swift sailing ship, with Science at the helm and adventure in the foretop"; still another says that "it bristles with adventure and is brimful of education in aviation". Anyhow it is a great seller as each day's orders show.
